

LUNCH – DEBATE

Working Group on SPACE, SECURITY & DEFENCE

Tuesday, 14 June 2016 from 13:00 until 14:30 hrs

Room: European Parliament/ Members Restaurant-Salon
Rue Wiertz 60, B-1047 Brussels

“European Public Safety Services and their communication infrastructure: It’s time for a reform!”

The current refugee crisis and terrorist threats do also point at a broader issue in the EU which merits being addressed: public safety services. Public safety networks provide mission critical communication solutions for police, fire and rescue departments, emergency medical services and other critical government services. These type of services have specific communication requirements; their network must be highly reliable and secure. Public safety concepts and approaches in the EU Member States have to a large extent ignored evolving communication technology solutions, especially in data transfers and they lack a single market approach. This renders them quickly out-of-date, expensive and it complicates cross-border co-operation. What impulses can we give to allow public safety services to catch up?
